David Ayres

A wonderful celebration of the sixties
The flip side of sixties celebrities' memoirs

Fourteen delightful stories about growing up, fighting your parents, discovering love and finding your feet in life, populated by marvellous characters which bring the 1960s to life.

Who doesn't want to meet Cherry, the Latin girl, with a bob that is very Cilla Black, who gives Glyn his first taste of love, a drama queen who causes nothing but trouble or hear the story of Baz (Barry actually) and his hatred of sausages?

Spend some time in the company of two friends, Neil a Mod and John a Rocker, and find out more about why Raymond wasn't bored. 'He was never bored, it was just that sometimes he couldn't find anything to do.'

What will happen to Fret after he has made a decision about the band? In the midst of it all, teenager Keith learns something about Mr Davies, the fruit and veg man.

Do you want to hang out with these characters?

David Ayres was a language teacher for many years before turning his attention to special needs education. He began writing poetry and short stories from an early age and won an award for English literature at school when he was just seventeen. His work has been widely published and he continues writing because, as he tells people, he can't help it.
